Preface

The Current Population Report series has long been recognized as an important source of demographic information on a wide variety of population-related topics. This Index is the first bibliographic inventory of all Current Population Reports and is designed to provide a ready resource for Federal agencies, Congress, and universities, as well as librarians, scholars, researchers, and the general public. Individual publications are listed sequentially by subject, series number, year covered, area or level of coverage, and title. Supplements to this basic Index will be issued annually.

Reports published prior to January 1979 may not be available in printed form. However, copies may be ordered in microfiche or in hard copy from microfiche from Customer Services Section (Publications), Data User Services Division, Bureau of the Census, Washington, D.C. 20233. Publications also may be located in Census Depository Libraries and public libraries across the country. Information on Government and Census libraries can also be obtained from the Customer Services Section.

Not included in this Index is Series P-28, a collection of special censuses contracted for by State and local governments. When these governments deem it necessary to request a special census of their area, a reimbursable contract is made with the Bureau of the Census to conduct a local census. A separate summary of Special Censuses is published bi-annually, and individual copies of these reports are available from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402.

Research and composition for this revised edition of the Index was performed mainly by Catherine O'Brien, assisted by Etta Hinnant, under the general direction of Johanna Barten, Statistical Information Staff. Typing and layout assistance was performed by Monica Guthrie. The report was planned and produced in Publications Services Division.

[1]Newly defined metropolitan statistical areas (MSA's) and also certain terminology changes were announced by the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) effective June 30, 1983. The previous term "standard metropolitan statistical area" was shortened to metropolitan statistical area. If an area has more than 1 million population and meets certain other specified requirements, it now is termed a "consolidated metropolitan statistical area" (CMSA) and consists of major components recognized as "primary metropolitan statistical areas" (PMSA's). Many of these PMSA's were formerly recognized as SMSA's and the majority were also included in standard consolidated statistical areas defined by OMB begining in 1975, each of which consisted of two or more closely associated SMSA's. Metropolitan areas not included in CMSA's are designated simply as metropolitan statistical areas (MSA's).

Section 1. Black Population

These reports offer a statistical overview or profile of the demographic, social, and economic characteristics of the Black population in the United States. The reports present an analysis of population distribution, income, labor force, education, family composition, health, housing, voting, and other major aspects of life. The most recent publication in the P-23 series on this subject is divided into two parts: the first features historical trends from 1790 to 1975, and the second covers recent trends from 1975 to 1978.

Note: In both text and tables, the terms "Black" or "Negro" are used interchangeably when the relevant data are available exclusively for Blacks. The "Negro and other races" describes persons of all races other than White and is used whenever data for Blacks alone are not available over the period of time shown. Generally, statistics for the national population of Negro and other races reflect the demographic and economic characteristics of the Black population, since about 90 percent of the population of Negro and other races is Black.

Section 2. Children and Youth

These reports trace changes among children and youth in the areas of population growth and distribution, migration, education, marital status, living arrangements, and fertility. A special report on daytime care of children is P-20, No. 298. (School enrollment is shown in Section 18.)

Section 7. Geographic Areas

These reports contain estimates of the population of the United States, regions, states (with components of change), standard metropolitan statistical areas, and counties. Individual State reports display data by state for counties and incorporated places. Data for outlying areas of Guam, Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands, American Samoa, Trust Territory of Pacific Islands, and the Northern Mariana Islands are also presented. Many of the population estimates issued in Series P-25 have been superseded over time; only those estimate reports still current in the series are listed here.

Section 10. Income

These reports show money income and poverty status of households, families, and persons in the United States. Certain reports in this series display data by regions, divisions, and states. Household composition and characteristics, including occupation, educational attainment, and labor force status of wives are contained in these reports. Series P-70 a new series in 1984 presents monthly information on income, labor force experience, and participation in major government assistance programs. The survey will provide new information on the changing economic situation of households and persons in the United States. Data from the Survey of Income and Program Participation will be published on a quarterly basis. The first such report was released for the third quarter of 1983. The report numbering system shown as P-70-83-4 for the fourth quarter has been modified for future reports and will return to its original numerical sequence P-70, No. 3 since this series will not be restricted to quarterly reports.
